

Signature: North-South-West-Center

Feminine/Masculine Balance: 3/3

Feminine numbers are overall tougher, more tenacious, and enduring but they lack the masculine energy of spontaneity. Masculine numbers have an immediate and noticeable effect, but their impact doesn't last long.

Cardinal Points

The North represents the end of the old and the beginning of the new.

The number one resonates strongly with the energies of knowledge and communication. People under the influence of this number are often unsatisfied with knowing just the basics; the exploration of truth in its entirety is what drives their ambition.

The East reflects the energies of enthusiasm and joy that take root in the developmental stages of new ideas.

The South resonates the liveliness needed to present ideas to others. People with the South represented in their Personal Codes share the qualities of charisma, curiosity and expressiveness. To put it quite simply, you don't have difficulty finding supporters for what you believe in, whether it be research findings, a philosophy or a way of life.

You give others the impression that you're strong, but you may hold an inner fear that you won't be able to fulfill your commitments and make good on your promises. You may have even developed a reputation of not following through on your word, but what people don't see is that this is often due to you taking on more than you can handle. Another inner struggle you face is the feeling that you haven't taken full advantage of your day. This may be a recurring thought you have at night right before you go to sleep.

If you don't exhibit these qualities and you do have the South in your Personal Code, it could be very likely that you were suppressed by a stronger personality as a child, which stunted your personal development. (See the book for suggestions on how to tap into your inner self if this is the case.)

Having the two in your energetic signature makes you more prone to spontaneity than if you were only working with a seven. You approach things in a more determined, less enduring way as well.

The energy associated with the seven is slightly less fierce than, and not as spontaneous as, that of the two. This number influences you to take a little longer to make decisions.

If you have an excess influence in the South, it is experienced more dramatically than if you had an imbalance at any other Cardinal Point. This imbalance is easy to see in the form of over-enthusiasm or even hysterics that can lead to a need to dominate or take over the control of a situation. Perhaps because of the excess enthusiasm imparted by the extreme energies of an excess South, these people also tend to perspire more than others; it's a way to release the tension of the energies you keep within you when you don't express yourself authentically. You also run the risk of being called a windbag—talking so much that people want to run away from your rhetoric. If you fall into this category, it's best to avoid surrounding yourself with the color red, which includes avoiding wearing it. Focus on blues and blacks to help cultivate balance within you.

The West embodies the organizational qualities needed to turn a dream into a reality. Western energies are powered by tremendous strength; your willpower and purposefulness are unchallenged by the other Cardinal points. With the West represented in your Personal Code, you're completely fine with being the hardest working workhorse in the field as long as your vision is clear and you believe that success is on your path. With that, you're always open to constructive criticism; anything to open you up to meaningful changes that benefit your progress.

A born leader? Yes, you are. However, patience is not exactly one of your many virtues. You have the perseverance and business drive to take projects from ideas to working pieces and your financial prowess make successful money management second nature to you. There are many geniuses and renown inventors with the influence of the West in their Personal Codes, but since their work is often ahead of its time, many of them are only acknowledged for their contributions after they've crossed over.

Nothing would hurt you more than not being taken seriously, whether that means others not believing in your new idea, not appreciating how important your goals are to you, or not understanding why you haven't given up yet.

If you want to promote the energies of the West, fill your home environment, your office and your closet with the color white. Of particular importance is limiting the amount of green you wear if you want to further cultivate the qualities of the West, since green effectively blocks the energies of the West.

The energies of the four are often found among groups of skilled workers, engineers and self-made successes. You're very talented with your hands, producing beautiful things with them that make others feel they have two left hands. This could manifest in many ways, from having the innate talent to decorate a home with beauty and grace to building beautiful homes from the ground up.

The gift of the Center is that of stability. Emotional ups and downs are not part of your experience. You feel compelled to help, to nurture, and to give generously from a place of groundedness and calm. On the surface, there is a contradiction about this energy: you often experience strong homesickness, while at the same time fully knowing that you aren't tied to any one place in this world; you want to travel or even move to new locations as much as you can. People of the center tend to gravitate toward philanthropic organizations or want to work in areas that help them give back to their communities in some other way, particularly if the community is worldwide.

One of the pitfalls of the people of the Center is being happy with helping others or being there for them without paying attention to whether it's actually helping the situation. In other words, you will justify to yourself that the good feeling you get from helping out means that you're doing a good thing, regardless of whether your intentions are beneficial, genuine, or unconditional. In this way, you may run the risk of robbing others of their right to independence and freedom to learn on their own, thus creating material or emotional dependence on you.

The energies of the zero are similar to those of the five, but in addition to your connection to nature and the earth, zero integrates a little of all the other Numbers and Cardinal Points and leans more toward the spiritual than the natural senses.

Missing Stations

East: You tend to shy away from commotion if you lack the number three in your Personal Code. Without the number eight, you tend to overcomplicate things. With an overbalance, as well as a lack of a representation, of the numbers of the East, you have a tendency not to consider the consequences of the things you say (a lack of empathy).

Aside from surrounding yourself with more of the color green to offset the void, you can also make conscious steps toward developing the gifts that these numbers impart. For example, practice improving your communication skills by listening more carefully in conversations to try to connect with the message between the words of the person speaking; focus on listening to the true message being transmitted rather than just the surface words being said. Another wonderful way to begin balancing your East is to surround yourself with people who have this influence in their Codes. The odd thing is that you'll often try very hard to avoid these people because you see them as too emotional and being around them is unpleasant for you because you'd much prefer pretending your emotions didn't exist.
