

Signature: East-West

Feminine/Masculine Balance: 1/3

Feminine numbers are overall tougher, more tenacious, and enduring but they lack the masculine energy of spontaneity. Masculine numbers have an immediate and noticeable effect, but their impact doesn't last long.

Most of the numbers in your birthdate are masculine, which means that you have an easier time than others making decisions quickly. You're decisive but you may also have the tendency to be impatient and reckless in everyday situations.

Cardinal Points

The North represents the end of the old and the beginning of the new.

The East reflects the energies of enthusiasm and joy that take root in the developmental stages of new ideas. Having an eight or a three in your Personal Code imparts you with the gift of intuitive sight; you're able to see through the fake, right through to the genuine and you have an intuitive knack for doing the right thing at the right time. Your ability to read people can be uncanny and you are able to foresee the consequences of decisions through to their conclusions before they're even set in motion. This ability, which comes very hard for those without these numbers in their Codes, comes naturally to you.

People with these numbers also have very special healing abilities. It is not only that you can sift through all the noise of the drama to see right into the heart of an ailment. You have an organic understanding for the importance of treating the cause, not the symptom. You may have come up against quite a bit of resistance from those representing Western medicine as you tried to explain their misguided observations, but take heart that it is people of the East, like you, who will lead the return of holistic healing. Your gift for empathy and your ability to pursue a goal regardless of how challenging it is are your greatest powers. You're not clouded by the need for instant success and you don't let opposition diminish your sense of purpose.

One of your main challenges is fighting avoidance. You see things so clearly, but somehow prefer to sit back and enjoy the beauty around you without taking action when your intuition guides you to change. This can often lead you to create situations in which you're surprised at unpleasant outcomes, even though all the signs telling you to take action to avoid it. The remedy: exercise your willpower.

Easterly Extremes...

When you're under the influence of Eastern extremes (more than ten units in the East), you tend to suppress your feelings, hiding them deeply away to the point where you could be perceived as being distant and standoffish. Imbalance in this Cardinal point often takes a while to show itself and tends to manifest as emotional withdrawal. It could even be said that you don't appear as the person you really are. This suppression can manifest itself in an overwhelming feeling of explosiveness; often times you feel like you're about to explode from the inside. If this doesn't manifest in your waking hours, then you may express it in violence during sleep. And although this may sound strange, you're also the type of person who easily gets irritated at people who don't move a little to the side when you're walking toward them in the opposite direction. Your innate perception probably picks up that these types of people tend not to have any influence of the East in their birth dates.

Being disciplined is also very difficult for you. To counteract the imbalance of the East, avoid wearing and surrounding yourself with too much green and incorporate more of the color white in your surroundings.

The South resonates the liveliness needed to present ideas to others. People with the South represented in their Personal Codes share the qualities of charisma, curiosity and expressiveness.

The West embodies the organizational qualities needed to turn a dream into a reality. Western energies are powered by tremendous strength; your willpower and purposefulness are unchallenged by the other Cardinal points. With the West represented in your Personal Code, you're completely fine with being the hardest working workhorse in the field as long as your vision is clear and you believe that success is on your path. With that, you're always open to constructive criticism; anything to open you up to meaningful changes that benefit your progress.

A born leader? Yes, you are. However, patience is not exactly one of your many virtues. You have the perseverance and business drive to take projects from ideas to working pieces and your financial prowess make successful money management second nature to you. There are many geniuses and renown inventors with the influence of the West in their Personal Codes, but since their work is often ahead of its time, many of them are only acknowledged for their contributions after they've crossed over.

Nothing would hurt you more than not being taken seriously, whether that means others not believing in your new idea, not appreciating how important your goals are to you, or not understanding why you haven't given up yet.

If you want to promote the energies of the West, fill your home environment, your office and your closet with the color white. Of particular importance is limiting the amount of green you wear if you want to further cultivate the qualities of the West since green effectively blocks the energies of the West.

The energies of the four are often found among groups of skilled workers, engineers and self-made successes. You're very talented with your hands, producing beautiful things with them that make others feel they have two left hands. This could manifest in many ways, from having the innate talent to decorate a home with beauty and grace to building beautiful homes from the ground up.

Missing Stations

North: When your personal Code is missing the numbers of the North, you will have the tendency to assume that you know all there is to know and lack the urge to pursue greater knowledge. Making an effort to continue improving yourself through study and practice will help you reach balance in this area. A missing number one generally points to a lack of willpower. You can work toward filling in that void by making strides toward forming and confidently owning your opinions. A missing six renders it more challenging to understand the need for some compromises, life changes and fundamental philosophies on how you understand the world; you'll notice that it takes you longer than it does others to realize that you'd benefit from a change in behavior or outlook on life. In general, without the numbers of the North, you'll move away from introspection and self-observation and toward the assumption that you what's best, regardless of what others think. Of all the Stations that could be missing in your personal Code, it is most difficult to compensate for a lack of the numbers of the North.

South: People who don't have the numbers of the South represented in their Personal Codes may be difficult to listen to, particular if they're speaking publicly in front of an audience. As a result, they tend to feel misunderstood, unappreciated or simply left out of life. Even if on the outside, you lead a successful life, you'll still carry the fear of not being valued enough by those around you. Surrounding yourself with the color red will draw more energy to you, helping you manifest your ideas more easily and follow through on projects that you'd normally abandon before completion. You may already gravitate toward lively music when you're in need of the Southern influence, but if you haven't tried it yet, listen to energetic tunes when you feel down instead of opting for meditative tracks.

Center: Activities that promote groundedness will help compensate for a missing influence from the Central Cardinal point. If you don't have a zero or a five in your Personal Code, consider activities that allow you to commune with nature, or meditate for a few minutes each day to reconnect with your personal center. An interesting note to consider is that those with no Central influence who fall under an earth sign (Taurus, Virgo, or Capricorn) have an innate tendency to ground on their own so they may not feel the missing energies of the Center as much as other signs.

In terms of specifically missing one of the two Central numbers in your birth date, missing the five often leads to a lack of assertiveness in everyday life, while lacking a zero can lead to not feeling fully satisfied with yourself and having the compulsion to keep checking that everything was done right (even if you already have proof that it has). This could even manifest as perfectionism in those who turn the affliction into a seemingly marketable trait in their professional lives.

Those of you without a zero may also repeatedly ask yourselves whether you've made the right decisions in life, doubting your choices due to your lack of connection to your center. Meditation will help a great deal in alleviating these doubts, as it will teach you to reconnect with your inner voice—your intuition—and that reconnection will sprout the peaceful sense of knowing that you're on the right path when you follow your inner awareness. Another possible manifestation of this sense of doubt about one's choices in life can be depression, particularly on days when there are no concrete plans set in the calendar. The easiest way to counterbalance this low is to go be with nature to bring the awareness of the present back to you.
