

Signature: South-West

Feminine/Masculine Balance: 3/1

Feminine numbers are overall tougher, more tenacious, and enduring but they lack the masculine energy of spontaneity. Masculine numbers have an immediate and noticeable effect, but their impact doesn't last long.

Most of the numbers in your birthdate are feminine, which indicates that you have a noticeable patience about you. You're thoughtful but this quality can lead you into a state of hesitation, which can be difficult in situations where you have to act quickly.

Cardinal Points

The North represents the end of the old and the beginning of the new. Because you don't have an numbers in your North, you will likely have a difficult journey to becoming successful in any profession that requires you to perform on stage. But because of the influence of your numbers in the South, the opportunities are still openly available to you.

The East reflects the energies of enthusiasm and joy that take root in the developmental stages of new ideas.

The South resonates the liveliness needed to present ideas to others. People with the South represented in their Personal Codes share the qualities of charisma, curiosity and expressiveness. To put it quite simply, you don't have difficulty finding supporters for what you believe in, whether it be research findings, a philosophy or a way of life.

You give others the impression that you're strong, but you may hold an inner fear that you won't be able to fulfill your commitments and make good on your promises. You may have even developed a reputation of not following through on your word, but what people don't see is that this is often due to you taking on more than you can handle. Another inner struggle you face is the feeling that you haven't taken full advantage of your day. This may be a recurring thought you have at night right before you go to sleep.

If you don't exhibit these qualities and you do have the South in your Personal Code, it could be very likely that you were suppressed by a stronger personality as a child, which stunted your personal development. (See the book for suggestions on how to tap into your inner self if this is the case.)

The energy associated with the seven is slightly less fierce than and not as spontaneous as that of the two. This number influences you to take a little longer to make decisions.

A Southernly extreme...

If you have an excess influence in the South, it is experienced more dramatically than if you had an imbalance at another Cardinal point. This imbalance is easy to see in the form of over-enthusiasm or even hysterics that can lead to a need to dominate or take over the control of a situation. Perhaps because of the excess enthusiasm imparted by the extreme energies of an excess South, these people also tend to perspire more than others; it's a way to release the tension of the energies you keep within you when you don't express yourself authentically. You also run the risk of being called a windbag—talking so much that people want to run away from your rhetoric. If you fall into this category, it's best to avoid surrounding yourself with the color red, which includes avoiding wearing it. Focus on blues and blacks to help create that balance within you.

The West embodies the organizational qualities needed to turn a dream into a reality. Western energies are powered by tremendous strength; your willpower and purposefulness are unchallenged by the other Cardinal points. With the West represented in your Personal Code, you're completely fine with being the hardest working workhorse in the field as long as your vision is clear and you believe that success is on your path. With that, you're always open to constructive criticism; anything to open you up to meaningful changes that benefit your progress.

A born leader? Yes, you are. However, patience is not exactly one of your many virtues. You have the perseverance and business drive to take projects from ideas to working pieces and your financial prowess make successful money management second nature to you. There are many geniuses and renown inventors with the influence of the West in their Personal Codes, but since their work is often ahead of its time, many of them are only acknowledged for their contributions after they've crossed over.

Nothing would hurt you more than not being taken seriously, whether that means others not believing in your new idea, not appreciating how important your goals are to you, or not understanding why you haven't given up yet.

If you want to promote the energies of the West, fill your home environment, your office and your closet with the color white. Of particular importance is limiting the amount of green you wear if you want to further cultivate the qualities of the West since green effectively blocks the energies of the West.

People with a nine in their Personal Codes have what it takes to be very successful at business. Being influenced by the energies of this number can sometimes make you difficult to deal with, however. Having said that, you usually get your way, so the difficulty others have of dealing with your strong personality may be lost on you as you persevere to reach your next goal. That clarity of knowing what you want out of life actually makes you a bit easier to take, but for those with a nine who aren't sure what they want to do in life, you are particularly challenging on those around you.

The energies of the four are often found among groups of skilled workers, engineers and self-made successes. You're very talented with your hands, producing beautiful things with them that make others feel they have two left hands. This could manifest in many ways, from having the innate talent to decorate a home with beauty and grace to building beautiful homes from the ground up.

Westerly extremes...

When you have more than ten Units represented in the West (e.g., a nine and a four), you may be prone to egotistical outbursts or refuse to work in a team even though it would produce much more beneficial business outcomes. Your strong influence from the West have thus marked you with a stubborn streak. You can often get your way, even when it's not merited, because of your steadfastness. Your combination of Western numbers can also bring about narcissistic tendencies; be careful about considering yourself superior to others because of your assumed or actual level of knowledge. This trait can make it difficult to be around you, particularly since you tend to be impatient of others' lack of efficiency or their primitiveness (as you see it); you can get pushy about your expectations for people to perform at a certain level. If you allow these tendencies to manifest, you run the risk of people seeing you as condescending or righteous. Intoxication with materialism, corruption, and selfishness will eventually destroy everything you've built if you don't take measures to counter the extremes of the West.

Missing Stations

North: When your personal Code is missing the numbers of the North, you will have the tendency to assume that you know all there is to know and lack the urge to pursue greater knowledge. Making an effort to continue improving yourself through study and practice will help you reach balance in this area. A missing number one generally points to a lack of willpower. You can work toward filling in that void by making strides toward forming and confidently owning your opinions. A missing six renders it more challenging to understand the need for some compromises, life changes and fundamental philosophies on how you understand the world; you'll notice that it takes you longer than it does others to realize that you'd benefit from a change in behavior or outlook on life. In general, without the numbers of the North, you'll move away from introspection and self-observation and toward the assumption that you what's best, regardless of what others think. Of all the Stations that could be missing in your personal Code, it is most difficult to compensate for a lack of the numbers of the North.

East: You tend to shy away from commotion if you lack the number three in your personal Code. Without the number eight, you tend to overcomplicate things. With an overbalance as well as a lack of a representation of the numbers of the East, you have a tendency not to consider the consequences of the things you say (a lack of empathy).

Aside from surrounding yourself with more of the color green to offset the void, you can also make conscious steps toward developing the gifts that these numbers impart. For example, practice improving your communication skills by listening more carefully in conversations to try to connect with the message between the words of the person speaking; focus on listening to the true message being transmitted rather than just the surface words being said. Another wonderful way to begin balancing your East is to surround yourself with people who have this influence in their Code. The odd thing is that you'll often try very hard to avoid these people because you see them as too emotional and being around them is unpleasant for you because you'd much prefer pretending your emotions didn't exist.

Center: Activities that promote groundedness will help compensate for a missing influence from the Central Cardinal point. If you don't have a zero or a five in your Personal Code, consider activities that allow you to commune with nature, or meditate for a few minutes each day to reconnect with your personal center. An interesting note to consider is that those with no Central influence who fall under an earth sign (Taurus, Virgo, or Capricorn) have an innate tendency to ground on their own so they may not feel the missing energies of the Center as much as other signs.

In terms of specifically missing one of the two Central numbers in your birth date, missing the five often leads to a lack of assertiveness in everyday life, while lacking a zero can lead to not feeling fully satisfied with yourself and having the compulsion to keep checking that everything was done right (even if you already have proof that it has). This could even manifest as perfectionism in those who turn the affliction into a seemingly marketable trait in their professional lives.

Those of you without a zero may also repeatedly ask yourselves whether you've made the right decisions in life, doubting your choices due to your lack of connection to your center. Meditation will help a great deal in alleviating these doubts, as it will teach you to reconnect with your inner voice—your intuition—and that reconnection will sprout the peaceful sense of knowing that you're on the right path when you follow your inner awareness. Another possible manifestation of this sense of doubt about one's choices in life can be depression, particularly on days when there are no concrete plans set in the calendar. The easiest way to counterbalance this low is to go be with nature to bring the awareness of the present back to you.
