

Signature: East-Center

Feminine/Masculine Balance: 2/2

Feminine numbers are overall tougher, more tenacious, and enduring but they lack the masculine energy of spontaneity. Masculine numbers have an immediate and noticeable effect, but their impact doesn't last long.

Cardinal Points

The North represents the end of the old and the beginning of the new. Because you don't have an numbers in your North, you will likely have a difficult journey to becoming successful in any profession that requires you to perform on stage.

The East reflects the energies of enthusiasm and joy that take root in the developmental stages of new ideas. Having an eight or a three in your personal code imparts you with the gift of intuitive sight; you're able to see through the fake, right through to the genuine and you have an intuitive knack for doing the right thing at the right time. Your ability to read people can be uncanny and you are able to foresee the consequences of decisions through to their conclusions before they're even set in motion. This ability, which comes very hard for those without these numbers in their birth dates, comes naturally to you.

People with these numbers also have very special healing abilities. It is not only that you can sift through all the noise of the drama to see right into the heart of an ailment. You have an organic understanding for the importance of treating the cause, not the symptom. You may have come up against quite a bit of resistance from those representing Western medicine as you tried to explain their misguided observations, but take heart that it is people of the East, like you, who will lead the return of holistic healing. Your gift for empathy and your ability to pursue a goal, regardless of how challenging it is, are your greatest powers. You're not clouded by the need for instant success and you don't let opposition diminish your sense of purpose.

And although this may sound strange, you're also the type of person who easily gets irritated at people who don't move a little to the side when you're walking toward them in the opposite direction on the street or in a corridor. Your innate perception probably picks up that these types of people tend not to have any influence of the East in their birth dates.

One of your main challenges is fighting avoidance. You see things so clearly, but somehow prefer to sit back and enjoy the beauty around you without taking action when your intuition guides you to change. This can often lead you to create situations in which you're surprised at unpleasant outcomes, even though all the signs tell you to take action to avoid it. The remedy: exercise your willpower.

Eastern extremes...

When you're under the influence of Eastern extremes (more than ten Units in the East), you tend to suppress your feelings, hiding them deeply away, to the point where you could be perceived as being distant and standoffish. Imbalance in this Cardinal point often takes a while to show itself and tends to manifest as emotional withdrawal. It could even be said that you don't appear as the person you really are. This suppression can manifest itself in an overwhelming feeling of explosiveness; often times you feel like you're about to explode from the inside. If this doesn't manifest in your waking hours, then you may express it in violence during sleep.

Being disciplined is also very difficult for you. To counteract the imbalance of the East, avoid wearing and surrounding yourself with too much green and incorporate more of the color white in your surroundings.

The South resonates the liveliness needed to present ideas to others. People with the South represented in their Personal Codes share the qualities of charisma, curiosity and expressiveness.

The West embodies the organizational qualities inherent in the logistics process of birthing a vision.

The gift of the Center is that of stability. Emotional ups and downs are not part of your experience. You feel compelled to help, to nurture, and to give generously from a place of groundedness and calm. On the surface, there is a contradiction about this energy: you often experience strong homesickness, while at the same time fully knowing that you aren't tied to any one place in this world; you want to travel or even move to new locations as much as you can. People of the center tend to gravitate toward philanthropic organizations or want to work in areas that help them give back to their communities in some other way, particularly if the community is worldwide.

One of the pitfalls of the people of the Center is being happy with helping others or being there for them without paying attention to whether it's actually helping the situation. In other words, you will justify to yourself that the good feeling you get from helping out means that you're doing a good thing, regardless of whether your intentions are beneficial, genuine, or unconditional. In this way, you run the risk of robbing others of their right to independence and freedom to learn on their own, thus creating material or emotional dependence on you.

The energies of the five bestow upon the people of the Center a deep connection to the earth. Gardeners and farmers often have a five in their Personal Codes.

The energies of the zero are similar to those of the five, but in addition, they integrate a little of all the other Numbers and Cardinal Points and lean more toward the spiritual than the natural senses.

Extremes of the Center...

Extremes of the Center manifest in various ways. An emphasis on moderation in daily life could lead to lethargy and could be a symptom of anxiety or of a lack of direction in life. Being a constant worrier or allowing others to continuously take advantage of you are other manifestations of this extreme. Wastefulness, absentmindedness, or dissatisfaction/impatience with yourself are other signs of an overactive Center. In these cases, avoid surrounding yourself with the color yellow (especially for your bed linens, walls and carpets), which could throw you into a dream state where you're easily distracted and feel uncertain about your direction.

Missing Stations

North: When your Personal Code is missing the numbers of the North, you will have the tendency to assume that you know all there is to know and lack the urge to pursue greater knowledge. Making an effort to continue improving yourself through study and practice will help you reach balance in this area. A missing number one generally points to a lack of willpower. You can work toward filling in that void by making strides toward forming and confidently owning your opinions. A missing six renders it more challenging to understand the need for some compromises, life changes and fundamental philosophies on how you understand the world; you'll notice that it takes you longer than it does others to realize that you'd benefit from a change in behavior or outlook on life. In general, without the numbers of the North, you'll move away from introspection and self-observation and toward the assumption that you know what's best, regardless of what others think. Of all the Stations that could be missing in your personal Code, it is most difficult to compensate for a lack of the numbers of the North.

South: People who don't have the numbers of the South represented in their Personal Codes may be difficult to listen to, particular if they're speaking publicly in front of an audience. As a result, they tend to feel misunderstood, unappreciated or simply left out of life. Even if, on the outside, you lead a successful life, you'll still carry the fear of not being valued enough by those around you. Surrounding yourself with the color red will draw more of this missing energy to you, helping you manifest your ideas more easily and follow through on projects that you'd normally abandon before completion. You may already gravitate toward lively music when you're in need of the Southern influence, but if you haven't tried it yet, listen to energetic tunes when you feel down instead of opting for meditative tracks.

West: People with no westerly influence in their dates of birth can take solace in knowing that they don't have to struggle with the industriousness and relentlessness that holds such a firm grip on people with a strong influence from this Cardinal Point. If you struggle with learning math, accounting, finance, or any other numbers-based discipline, try wearing more white when you engage in your studies, surround yourself with as few colors other than white as possible, and open yourself up to embracing the energies of this very powerful set of numbers.
